Product information

Stefano Daffonchio's Martina is named for his daughter. It is a blend of the local varieties Cortese and Sasla. Cortese, of course, is famous for being the main ingredient in Gavi, while the more obscure Sasla is actually Chasselas, the white variety well-known in Switzerland. The wine is vinified in steel with several months lees contact and battonage.

Producer information

Stefano Daffonchio farms 25 acres in eastern Piemonte's Colli Tortonesi. The area is home to the rare Timorasso, a variety so challenging to grow that it has but a handful of producers. Hard work pays off however in lovely, ageworthy wines that burst with fresh acidity and aromatic character. Stefano produces excellent wines from other local varieties as well. Stefano's wines are must for fans of Italy's hidden regional treasures.
